

Financial Services

Schuyler, Roche & Crisham is an established and respected leader in Financial Services law, specializing in the litigation, arbitration and resolution of complex disputes in the securities and commodities industry.

We offer a unique combination of expertise and agility to clients across the financial services sector, representing clients ranging from one of the world's largest financial services firms to local commodity pool operators and introducing brokers. Backed by a group of attorneys with deep experience in the financial services industry, we have built our reputation on our ability to achieve favorable and cost-effective legal outcomes for our clients.

Our Financial Services practice group has proven experience representing our clients' interests with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA), the National Futures Association (NFA), the Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) and other regulatory bodies.

Practice areas in the Financial Services group include:

- Securities Litigation and Arbitration
- Commodity Futures
- Regulatory and Compliance